

Kreditsearch.ch Updates Loan Calculator and Comparison Tools for Switzerland

August 27, 2026

ZURICH, CH - August 27, 2026 -

Kreditsearch.ch, an independent loan information and comparison portal serving consumers across Switzerland, has updated its loan calculator and refreshed its rate comparison resources to reflect current conditions in the Swiss lending market. The updated tools are designed to help borrowers assess their options before submitting a loan request.

The platform operates as a neutral resource and does not issue loans or provide financial advice. Instead, it gathers and organizes information on personal loans, car loans, small loans, quick loans, and financing for self-employed individuals, allowing consumers to compare conditions across the Swiss market in one place. The comparisons are prepared independently, without advertising influence on the recommendations.

Central to the refreshed offering is the loan calculator, which allows users to estimate their maximum affordable rate based on income and expenses. Paired with a budget calculator, the tools help consumers understand what they can realistically afford before approaching a lender. Both tools remain free to use and are accompanied by a loan checklist and educational resources including a glossary and frequently asked questions.

Kreditsearch.ch has placed particular emphasis on segments of the population that often face difficulty accessing clear loan information. This includes self-employed workers, retirees, foreigners living in Switzerland, and temporary workers, as well as individuals seeking guidance on loans despite an active debt collection record, known in Switzerland as Betreibung. The portal also covers refinancing and loan consolidation, business financing for small and medium enterprises, and comparisons of peer-to-peer lending platforms.

The timing of the update reflects ongoing shifts in Swiss loan interest rates, which the platform monitors and reports on through its guides. By presenting current rate information alongside its calculators, Kreditsearch.ch aims to give consumers a clearer picture of how market conditions affect the cost of borrowing.

Content on the platform is available in both German and English, extending access to a broader range of residents. The guides are independently researched and updated on a regular basis, covering topics such as private loans, car loans, and the specific requirements that apply to different borrower categories. Each guide is intended to explain the loan process in plain terms and outline the requirements, interest considerations, and documentation typically involved.

Alongside the updated calculator, this report on current market conditions forms part of the platform's broader effort to improve transparency in the Swiss lending landscape. The methodology used for comparisons is disclosed so that users can understand how different providers and conditions are assessed.

Kreditsearch.ch is an independent information and comparison portal based in Switzerland. The platform provides comprehensive, provider-neutral information on the types of loans available in the country, including personal loans, car loans, small loans, quick loans, and financing options for self-employed individuals, retirees, foreigners, and temporary workers. Through its comparison resources, loan guides, and free tools such as the loan calculator and budget calculator, kreditsearch.ch supports Swiss consumers in understanding their options and preparing informed loan requests. The company does not issue loans or offer financial advice, and its comparisons are conducted without advertising influence.
